Did you know that it's near impossible to make backups of Prometheus data?

(..no, I didn't know what Goutham would talk about..)

So what happens if your home server dies
and you don't have time to rebuild it?

Did you expect pretty graphs?

Well.. no.

I am here simply to whet your appetite.

I get easily annoyed with inefficiency;
if something works, I will use it in ALL the places

(backups seem to be an exception)

..same label printer
..same screwdrivers
..same keyboard & mouse
..same type of (colour-coded) notebook

..and I flooded every place with literally 100+ pens of the same type

..that includes having the same red Swingline stapler and home and at work

What if I could re-use Prometheus for useful and,
more importantly, useless things?

```
github.com/prometheus/node_exporter

(..no, I didn't know what Nicolai would talk about..)

..but whatever, here you go:

Have you ever argued with Brian?

"There is no use for weight or mass in a time series database"

USB scales exporting coffee grinder fill state

..and alerting when it's empty

..because it takes me less than ten seconds to reach the coffee grinder.
